

First impressions of the Panasonic 100-300mm

The kayaking was a bust. I did get a chance to use the 100-300mm, just no blue herons. I'm really happy with it, and put it through its paces in some shots with limited light. It has a lot of "character", something that I would expect with one of my older legacy lenses. This has auto-focus ☐☐

So below are a selection of various shots over the weekend. There are some macros of bird feathers and bones with my Olympus 60mm, the vast majority are the 100-300. Most have some minor cropping, some more than minor. The cows were a real treat ☐☐

20130925-194710.jpg

20130925-194721.jpg

20130925-194734.jpg

20130925-194745.jpg

20130925-194758.jpg

20130925-194808.jpg

20130925-194819.jpg

20130925-194830.jpg

20130925-194841.jpg

20130925-194854.jpg

20130925-194908.jpg

20130925-194919.jpg

20130925-194928.jpg

20130925-194941.jpg

20130925-194951.jpg

20130925-195008.jpg

20130925-195018.jpg

20130925-195034.jpg

20130925-195045.jpg

20130925-195108.jpg

20130925-195118.jpg

20130925-195130.jpg

20130925-195142.jpg

20130925-195156.jpg

20130925-195209.jpg

20130925-195219.jpg

20130925-195231.jpg

20130925-195247.jpg

20130925-195258.jpg

20130925-195312.jpg

20130925-195325.jpg

20130925-195336.jpg

20130925-195355.jpg

20130925-195405.jpg

20130925-195415.jpg

20130925-195426.jpg

Source: <https://www.idonthaveacoolname.com/first-impressions-of-the-panasonic-100-300mm/>