Homelands – Dance at the NAC

Wow! I saw Homelands last night at the NAC and I was very impressed with the production. The three dancers on the stage were behind a thin screen that they use to project images of running water and other elements of nature. At one point the dancer on the stage was duplicated 6 or 7 times on the projected screen giving the impression that the dancers were joined by ghosts on the stage. The projected images sometimes occupied the top half of the screen creating a sense of aporia between real and fantasy, presence and hauntings. Very impressive and kudos to the production and dancers!

Renowned Six Nations of the Grand River artist Santee Smith choreographs an award-winning multimedia performance celebrating the timeless kinship between Indigenous women, their lands, and waterways. Immerse yourself in a striking fusion of earthy visuals, cinematic media, and powerful performances on A'nowarà:ke (Turtle Island).

Source: https://www.idonthaveacoolname.com/homelands-dance-at-the-nac/