

Quiet Friday morning photos: the 60mm for architecture

Nice morning to take photos! Thankfully my neighbourhood has quieted with the egress of the student hoards for the holiday. I put my shoes on, grabbed my sunglasses, and went out for some shots. No nature or anything to really use the macro, and the flower cart that I was depending on in the Market was not yet open! It was really nice to be outside with the sun and although cool out, it is shaping up to be a nice spring-like day! Not many cars either, so you can actually hear the birds!

These were fully automatic shots since I was lazy, I did look for lots of range in the images but the light was quite harsh. It has been a while since the sun has been out! This 60mm is really nice! I really cannot wait for the opportunity to really use the macro and also use this as a portrait lens... I think that is where this lens really shines... for architecture, I'll stick with my Tokina 11-16mm.

image

.

image

.

image

image

.

.

image

.

image

Source: <https://www.idonthaveacoolname.com/quiet-friday-morning-photos/>